

Are You in Pain?*SANTA FE'S PROUD POSITION

Bast Is That One Must Go to New Mexico to Find the Real American Art.

The new museum of Santa Fe claims that "one must go to New Mexico to find an American architecture and an American art." The terraced houses of the Pueblos, the Franciscan missions, are ingeniously, for they have been produced by the environment, the native building material, and the climate. In Santa Fe, through the efforts of the School of American Research, there has been fostered a renaissance of this ancient American architecture, one of the finest results being the Museum building, or Temple of St. Francis and the Martyrs.

Six of the ancient Franciscan mission churches, 200 years old, are reproduced in the facade without destroying the unity of its appearance; they are Acoma, San Felipe, Cochiti, Laguna, Santa Ana and Pecos. The outlines are hard, stiff plumb lines or levels. There are no exact repetitions or parallelisms, such as mark the California mission style. The massive doors of Santa Clara have been reproduced. There are cloisters and, of course, a patio. The new museum is an art gallery, part of the Museum of New Mexico, whose priceless archaeological and historical collections are housed in the Palace of the Governors. Here are Taos and Santa Fe art colonies, numbering about 40 artists of international note.

WAS USED TO QUICK ACTION

Moving Picture Scenario Writer Acustomed to Taking Things "on the Fly" as It Were.

He had never seen her before, but he fell in love with her as she stepped from the surface car. "Come," he said, grabbing her by the arm. "We will take a taxi to the nearest clergyman and be married."

While waiting for the minister to put on a clean collar, wash his hands and otherwise prepare for the ceremony, the young man telephoned to the nearest furniture store. "Hello! Is this the general manager? Well, I want you to furnish a three-room apartment for me. There is one advertised in this morning's Planet, No. 42 West One Hundred and Steeple street. Yes, it is not very far from you. Have the furniture there in ten minutes, please!"

Eleven minutes later a taxi raced through One Hundred and Steeple street, and the bride and groom entered their new home.

"Doesn't this seem—er—a little bit sudden to you?" asked the bride, as she sat down to get her breath.

"No, not exactly," replied the groom, "in fact, it seems the most natural thing in the world. You see, for the last five years I've done nothing but write moving-picture scenarios."—Film Fan.
